10. [ ] Talked further with Robert Smart, House Armed Services Committee staff, concerning the amendment of Section 305 of the Communications Act transmitted to the Congress by the Department of State. I advised Smart that in the absence of preliminary discussion with appropriate Committees by the State Department, while we were willing to do whatever we could to assist in the passage of the bill, we did not propose to assume responsibility for steering this proposal through the Congress and therefore we planned to take no further action until State Department's position crystallized. Smart agreed with this and thanked us for keeping him advised.
